2025 AFL GRAND FINAL

THE ROAD TO VFL/AFL GRAND FINALS - AN OVERVIEW

1897 and 1924: The top four teams after the home and away series played each other in a round-robin series, the winner being declared premiers.

1898 to 1900: After 14 home and away rounds, the top team was declared to be "minor premiers". Three rounds of "sectional matches" were then played, the winners of each section playing off in the final. If necessary, the "minor premiers" could challenge the final winners.

1901: Although the three sectional rounds were still played, they were included with the home and away games to determine the final four that played off, the winners of each semi final playing in the grand final. There was no right of challenge.

1902 to 1923 and 1925 to 1930: This system was known as the "Argus" system. Again, the team that finished on top after the home and away series was declared minor premiers (subject to certain restrictions). The four top teams played off, the winners of the semi finals playing off in the final. The minor premiers, if defeated in their semi final or final, could (subject to the rules) challenge the final winners for the premiership.

1931 to 1971: The original Page-McIntyre system. The top four clubs after the home and away games played under the following system: first semi final – third v fourth – loser omitted; second semi final – first v second; preliminary final – loser of second semi final v winner of first semi final – loser omitted; grand final – winner of second semi final v winner of preliminary final.

1972 to 1990: The final five system was introduced. The top five clubs played under the following system: elimination final – fourth v fifth – loser omitted; qualifying final – second v third; first semi final – loser of qualifying final v winner of elimination final – loser omitted; second semi final – first v winner of qualifying final; preliminary final – loser of second semi final v winner of preliminary final – winner of second semi final v winner of preliminary final

1991: A final six system was introduced. The top six clubs after the home and away series played under the following system: first elimination final – fifth v sixth – loser omitted; second elimination final – third v fourth – loser omitted; qualifying final – first v second. The four remaining clubs, in order of qualifying final winner, second elimination final winner, qualifying final loser and first elimination final winner, then played out the finals as per the Page-McIntyre final four system, with the first and second semi finals in week two.

1992 to 1993: The final six system was revised and operated as follows: first elimination final – fourth v fifth – loser eliminated; second elimination final – third v sixth – loser eliminated; qualifying final – first v second. The winner of the qualifying final played the higher-placed elimination final winner in the second semi final. The loser of the qualifying final played the lower-placed elimination final winner as the finals system reverted to the Page-McIntyre final four system.

1994 to 1999: A final eight system was used. All eight teams played in the first round, first v eighth, second v seventh and so on. The two lowest-placed losers were eliminated, the two highest-placed winners proceeded to the preliminary finals with the remaining four clubs playing in semi finals. The semi final winners played in the preliminary finals with the winners of these two matches fighting out the grand final.

2000 to today: A revision was made to the final eight system. It is a complicated but fair system. The qualifying and elimination finals (week 1), the semi finals (week 2) and the preliminary finals (week 3) have been explained in previous MCC Library Fact Sheets. Today's grand final is played between the winner of the first preliminary final (Sydney Swans) and the winner of the second preliminary final (Brisbane Lions).
